

Corrie ten Boom lived in a little watch shop in the middle of Holland. She lived there with her papa, mama, and her sister Betsie. It was a pretty little shop, with a sign by the door. The window was full of watches that ticked away gently. In the background the clocks made loud ringing noises.

Corrie ten Boom lived in a little watch shop in the middle of Holland.

Corrie loved her papa. He was one of the best watchmakers in the city. Corrie's papa loved God and he loved to teach his little girls about him too. Corrie felt safe with her papa. She felt even safer when she knew that God loved her. It was wonderful to know that loving and trusting in Jesus was all she needed to do. Jesus' love would keep her safe forever – even when she died. Corrie had never felt so safe before.

Corrie felt safe with her papa.
She felt even safer when she knew that God loved her.